solo as sung by 'little Mare,' It was very difficult. It was marked from beginning to end 'Andantino,' 'Dolce,' 'Afletuoso,' 'Crescendo,' 'Piano,' Pianissimo,' with changing keys, and flats and sharps springing out from unexpected places; but she had conquered it all. Three or four accomplished singers who had come from Bos'on to pass Thanksgiving in the country, and who attended the who had come from Bos on to pass a unmag-giving in the country, and who attended the last rehearsal, were in raptures with little Mary's singing. They had heard Tedesco, and Biscaccianti, and Mudam Bishop; and they say, 'for a country girl, she is a prod-

In due time, Thanksgiving day arrived; and while the 'second hell's was ringing news came to the village that a very serious accident had happened to the Universalist Minister. His horse had thown him, and either his neck or leg was broken; the boy who had brought the news had forgotten which. I hope it is not his neck,' said the rich and charitable old church member.—When Deacon Goodman heard that remark, he held up his hands and exclaimed 'I never!' Now the Deacon, dearly loved good preaching, and the meeting house was to him a 'house of feasting.' But his religion was of a very practical kind and although the thought but precious little of his good works, he took care to do a good many of them, and was far from believing with Amsdorf, that 'good works are an impediment to salvation.' So, said he to Mrs. Goodman, 'do you go to the house or feasting, and get all the good you can and I will go to the house of mourning, and do all I can.' And away he went to see, and if possible relieves the Universalist minister.

It is now proper for the Biographer to hint at another trait in the good Deacon's character. He was ruther's et in his way;' or, in other words, he was deadfully obstrate in what he thought a good cause; and he was generally correct in appreciating the merits of the cause.

We all know that musical people are apticus; and who has ever known a theatrical orchestry, or even a village chor, that had not a regular 'thou up at least once a year? Beyond all doubt, Deacon Good man's inging was a very serious grivance to the choir; and an own all as more and the was indirectly and him feely and had the read of the cause.

We shall know that musical people are apticus; and who has ever known a theatrical orchestry, or even a village chor, that had not a regular 'thou up at least once a year? Beyond all doubt, Deacon Good man's was ever for. But there is a point beyond which for bearance is no longer a virtue. Great pains had been taken by the choir in getting up a new Authern, (selected from Mozart, for Thanksgring day, and the very gam of the great merits he was indulged; and his regular had had not a regular 'thou when the control of the great merits he was indulged Seems to me you are rather crusty, said the Deacon, but I suppose you are half frozen, and so sit down and thaw yourself out."

'I thank you, said the Minister, 'but I merely called to tell you that I have just left a scene of misery; and I want you to go there as early as you can in the morning. City Intelligence.

Woon.—Our country people bid fair to regulate the price of this article of universal consumption, which has hitherto been done by our enterprising wood merchants. The increase of wood for sale at the Centre Market in wagons from the country has, within the last six months, exceeded any other article of trade,—numbering, some mornings, as many as twenty-five loads, and most of it of excellent quality,—and which we have seen sold for one and even two dollars less per cord than the prices at the wood yards. This will no doubt tend to injure the sale of wood at the yards. We strongly suspect that some and which we have seen sold for one and even two dollars less per cord than the prices at the wood yards. This will ne doubt tend to higher the sale of wood at the yards. We strongly suspect that some of our wood merchants begin to small a rul, as several aloads of wood have recently been exposed on sale at the market, which on account of its length looked very much as if it came from the yards, to say nothing of its being in caris marked W.
